Icewine

Icewine is a type of dessert wine produced from grapes that have been frozen while still on the vine. The sugars and other dissolved solids do not freeze, but the water does, allowing for a more concentrated wine to develop. Canada is the world's largest producer of ice wines, producing a greater volume of ice wine than all other countries combined, followed by Germany.

Loire

The wines of Coteaux du Layon are interesting dinner and after-dinner wines. When the wine is young, the acidity makes the wines enjoyable with dinner. As the wine matures, the fruit continues to come forward. Quarts (pronounced CAR) de Chaume is lemony, with sweet acidity, and goes well with light desserts.

Trockenbeerenauslese

(TRAU-ken-BEERN-ouse-lay-zeh) The sweetest most difficult to make of all the great German dessert wines. The grapes are left on the vines until they look like raisins and then picked grape by grape. The grapes contain a very high degree of sugar. Some estates only make this wine once every 10 years.

HUNGARY

The Hungarian word 'Aszu' means 'candied', the grapes affected by the Botrytis Cinerea with a high sugar content are picked manually. Tokaji Aszu is only made in prime years, and its sweetness is measured in Puttonyos. Measurements range from 3 to 6 Puttonyos. A Tokaji made entirely from Aszu grapes is not labeled using the Puttonyos system but is known as Eszencia. Also called nectar, Eszencia or Essencia is often described as one of the most exclusive wines in the world.

PORTUGAL

Madeira

Madeira is a fortified wine made on the Portuguese
Madeira Islands, off the coast of Africa.
It is produced in a variety of styles from dry to sweet.
As a result of the wine's acidity, fortification, oxidation, and heating, Madeira has the longest aging potential of any wine. Even upon opening, it will not lose its desired sensory attributes for months.

Sercial

A very dry Madeira that is usually enjoyed as an aperitif. It has a slightly nutty taste.

Port

Port wine or simply port, also known as vinho do Porto is a Portuguese fortified wine produced in the Douro Valley of northern Portugal. It is typically a sweet red wine, often served with dessert, although it also comes in dry, semi-dry, and white varieties. Grapes grown for port are generally characterized by their small, dense fruit which produces concentrated and long-lasting flavors, suitable for long aging.

White Port

White Ports are made from white grapes only.
They can either be dry or slightly sweet.

Ruby Port

Ruby Ports spend the least amount of time in wood. They are filtered just prior to bottling so they do not have to be decanted. The maker strives to make every bottle exactly the same year after year. It is the most popular Port in France.

Other Port Styles

There are various styles of Port –Colheitas are from a single vintage and may have spent 20 to 50 years in cask. Reserves usually reflect the maker's style and are consistent from year to year. Late Bottled Vintage represent excellent values as they are made in a similar manner as Vintage Ports but from a vintage not quite as profound as a Vintage Port.

Vintage Port

Vintage Port is made from the best grapes in the Douro. The grapes are left to achieve full ripeness before they are picked, vinified and then fortified with high-proof grape spirit. Vintage Port spends little time aging in barrel. It is unfiltered and contains natural sediment, so decanting is a must. It is often said that no other wine requires as much time in bottle to balance itself. The finest examples are capable of vitality well after 50 years.

SPAIN

- Sherry-

Sherries are blends of wines that have been uniquely 'made' in soleras (huge groups of sherry-filled barrels ranging in age from a couple of years old to two hundred or more years old). Flavors vary with grapes used and winemaking styles. Some dessert sherries are sweet and creamy; some will be medium sweet to dry. All have characters of mellow nuttiness that comes from the soleras.
